

GIRL'S DEATH NOTE PROVED HIS OWN.

Brooklyn Man Planned a Double Tragedy, but Only He Died.

THIS IS THE ULTIMATE RESULT OF GAMBLING AND A DISSIPATED LIFE AND A WARNING TO YOUNG MEN.—John A. Jenkins, who killed himself, after trying to murder his sweetheart.

(Special to The Evening World.) PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—A young man, screaming for help and vainly trying to throw himself from a fourth-story window to escape a man, who with a revolver in his hand, had made her write a letter telling her friends how to dispose of her body after he had killed her, followed a moment later by the report of the revolver which snuffed out the life of the man who had planned a double tragedy, started the patrons of the Pennsylvania Terminal Hotel, 212 North street, about 11:20 o'clock last night.

The Girl's Story. The man was John J. Jenkins, thirty-two years old, an employee of the Keystone Telephone Company, who boarded at No. 14 North Thirteenth street. His home was in Brooklyn, N. Y. Miss Mary Barber, the young woman, who is held at the Fifteenth and Vine streets station as a witness, is employed in one of the department stores. This is her story: "I had been keeping company with Mr. Jenkins for about a year. He had always acted in a gentlemanly manner toward me, but he was insanely jealous of me. Finally his manner became so distasteful that about a month ago I gave him up. "This evening he came to my boarding-house at No. 219 North Thirteenth street and asked me to take a boat ride. I consented, and we went to Washington Park, returning about 10 o'clock. "He proposed going to some place where we could have a talk, and if we could not reach our differences, he said I would not stay out late, and he said he would take me home in an hour. Then we went to the place on Elbert street. "We were shown to a front room on the fourth floor, and the waiter had no sooner left the room than Jenkins, the door, locked it and put the key in his pocket. Then he whipped a revolver from his pocket and said: 'I'll give you just half an hour to pack and write to your friends, for I am going to kill you.' "Her Death Note. "Then he stood over me while I wrote the letter for my friends. I don't know if I could get some upstairs I could escape. So I asked him to get some beer. "He considered, but said if I made a noise while the water was in the room he would kill me on the spot. As soon as the water came I made a dash for the window and was half way out

HANGED HERSELF TO CHANDELIER.

Mrs. Silsinger Dead When Found by Husband.

John Silsinger, an insurance agent, walked into the parlor of his home, No. 10 Vermont street, Brooklyn, this morning and found his wife hanging from a chandelier. He went for Dr. Barnhart, who has an office in the neighborhood, but the woman was quite dead. Mrs. Silsinger was forty years old, she had been ill for a long time and her physician could find no hope of early recovery. Some time during the night she left her bed, went to the chandelier and hanged herself. She used a piece of clothing and held her feet from the floor until she was strangled. Two children mourn with their father.

SPARED BY A MIRACLE FROM ZIG-ZAG BOLT OF LIGHTNING.

Mrs. Madden's House in Westchester Was Struck, but the Woman and Her Children Were Unhurt, Though Electric Fluid Dodged All Through the Building.

That Mrs. Richard Madden, her three little children and a lady visitor were not instantly killed by a bolt of lightning that zig-zagged through the house, at No. 26 St. Lawrence avenue, Westchester Village, is one of the most miraculous freaks of nature. The bolt, which struck the cupola of the house with a crash that sounded like a dynamite explosion, jumped over the peak of the slated cable roof, slid down the eaves, shot through the dining-room window in a ball of fire, skirted under the table and across the floor into the kitchen, started out of a side window, shaking the next door neighbors and buried itself in the ground between the two houses.

Windows Were Shattered. The broken glass from the upper window fell with a crash over the little garden, and a tiny sheet of flame curled up from the roof. Men and women came running out from the neighboring houses. A bucket brigade was formed and the fire was soon extinguished. The lightning trailed between the five persons who were in the dining-room. As the house was struck they screamed loudly. Then they seemed to be struck by paralysis. For a moment they were speechless, and it was some time before they could move their limbs.

At various times the Evening World Mrs. Madden and her children told their thrilling experiences today. They are still suffering from the effects of the shock.

Mrs. Madden Tells Her Story. "It seemed to me that a thousand electrical batteries had been turned on me at once," said Mrs. Madden. "Then my limbs became suddenly stiff. I could not move. "It was the most terrible sensation I ever experienced. My husband is a policeman stationed at the Alexander avenue station. He had gone down there for the night. "It was about 8:30 o'clock and a friend, Mrs. Katherine Ford, of one hundred and thirty-sixth street and River avenue, was visiting me. We all sat in the dining-room. "Mrs. Ford and I sat near the door leading into the hall by the table. My little boy, Christopher, aged eight, was in an armchair by the window. "My other son, James, ten years old, was sitting on the lounge, between the window and the kitchen door. My daughter, Katherine, who is thirteen, sat at the foot of the lounge. "It had just started to rain. Suddenly there was an awful flash of blue light that blinded me. With it was a terrible explosion. "A big ball of flame came right through the window. It seemed to fill the room. "Bolt Entered Room. "I could see it zig-zag over the floor under the table and go out into the kitchen. I was numb and cold all over. For a moment I thought I would lose consciousness. Then I screamed and heard the children screaming. "My little boy on the lounge cried: 'Mamma, the house is on fire!' Then I realized I must get the little ones out. How we got out of the house I don't know. I took the children and ran into the street. Flames were coming from the roof, but the neighbors soon put out the fire. "Little Christopher, who sat by the window, was injured the most. He could not move and was hurt in the spine. Today he was better and we sent him to his grandmother. None of us could sleep last night. We were so nervous. "Little Katherine said: 'I saw a big light and there was a

FOUND PERPETUAL MOTION, HE SAYS. Remarkable Discovery of Enoch Giddings, Jr., of England, While Making Iron.

There arrived on the Lucania today Enoch Giddings, Jr., an iron manufacturer of Walsall, England, who comes over to explain a new process which he has discovered of making iron without puddling. Mr. Giddings, like his father, grandfather and his great-grandfather, has been in the iron business all his life. He claims that his discovery is one of the most valuable to the iron trade, and incidentally he declares he has a much greater discovery—that of perpetual motion. "I have not had the process of iron making patented," he said, "because the secret is mine and the process cannot be copied. It is a nature's process, and the iron turned out is pure. "Mr. Giddings claims for his process that there is a saving of 25 per cent, the largest reduction of area, and can stand the largest tensile strain. The iron was tested by Lloyd at Tipton and was pronounced a success, so says the discoverer. "Mr. Giddings did not explain his perpetual motion discovery except to say that it was nature and could be used in a most practical way. "I made the discovery," said he, "because I was working on my iron process. "Steam is an artificial power, and you have so many pounds of pressure to a square inch. In perpetual motion you could have millions and millions of pounds to the square inch. "A ship like the Lucania could be built to stand it, the trip to Liverpool could be made in two hours. Everything in nature is perpetual motion, and perpetual motion is nature. "Mr. Giddings will visit a number of iron manufacturers before leaving the country. "Other of the saloon passengers was J. P. Sharkey, who has come here to attend the semi-annual of the Young Men's Christian Association, of Boston, as the representative of the Ragged School Union of England; J. M. Smart and Edgar B. Griffiths, who are connected with the Southampton Cold Storage Company, which has erected a plant on American place at Southampton at a cost of $2,000,000.

DR. FREEMAN MADE SCENE.

Dr. Charles H. Freeman, who is said to be the fiancé of Miss Mary Wilkins, the authorities, made a scene at the post-office this morning to get his mail. He saw the two photographs and became very indignant. He hurried out to the street, picked up a big stone and returning hurried it at the glass covering the photographs, shattering it to pieces. Then he pulled the photographs of himself and Miss Wilkins out and tore them up. STAY FOR FAITH CURIST.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 25.—Lawyer Robert E. Farley, counsel for J. Luther Pearson, who is locked up because he refuses to pay a fine of $500 for failing to provide medical attendance for a foster daughter, who died from pneumonia, applied to Justice Keogh of the Supreme Court, to-day for a certificate of reasonable doubt so that the case might be taken to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The motion was granted.

BIG JOKE OF LITTLE FRIEND.

Lawyer Distributed Tickets for Matinee of "Florodora" To-Day.

Emanuel Friend enjoys the pleasant distinction of being the legal adviser of Edna Wallace Hopper. When Miss Hopper bought out the house at the Casino for the performance this afternoon and closed the theatre, that she might see the Handicap run Manager Fisher gave her all the tickets, which, of course, had been printed weeks in advance. The actress turned them over to her lawyer, a big bagful of them. Once in possession of the tickets Mr. Friend sat down and thought: "The he called to his clerk his thirteen-count 'em, thirteen—trustworthy office boys and gave them instructions. "I want you boys to go all over town," he said, "and drop these tickets in the street, in 'L' trains and in street-cars. Spot a man who looks like he would like something for nothing and drop the tickets where he is sure to pick them up." The tickets were indeed in pairs in the regulation Casino Theatre envelopes and the "thirteen-count 'em, thirteen—trustworthy office boys went forth. This was yesterday. When they came in Sunday a New Yorker were glazing over good seats for the Saturday matinee of "Florodora." The enjoyment of the thirteen-count 'em, thirteen—office boys was huge. But this was not all. In the course of his legal adventures Mr. Friend has done much work for people on the east side who are fearful of the fact that a lawyer must eat to live. He has these people down in his little book and he remembered them when he got the tickets. Calling his 6-count 'em, 6—stenographers to him he started them at writing tables, reading about as follows: "Mr. Isidore Knockouts (any name will do). "Dear Sir—Happening to have a couple of seats for to-morrow's performance at the Casino and being unable to go myself, I thought perhaps you might like to take in the show. Find the seats yourself. Trusting you will enjoy yourself I remain, yours truly, EMANUEL M. FRIEND.

BOLT HIT CAR; WOMEN INJURED. Wrecked the Trolley Controller and Caused a Runaway.

While the storm was at its height last night a Paterson electric car, bound for Little Falls, was climbing the Ellison street hill. This is a cut running between a mountain and a tributary of the Passaic. The elements were playing havoc with the electric wires, and conductor Pearson entered the car to escape the threatening lightning. As the car was almost at the top of the cut the controller, right under Mortimer McGill's hand, blew out. It had been hit by a flash of lightning. McGill was seized from the shock and dropped his right hand from the brake. In an instant the car dropped backward and with a mad rush, dashed down the hill. Six people were in the car, among them three women. At the bottom of the hill a sharp curve turns toward the raceway, and the passengers knew this. The men passengers rushed for the rear door. Pearson tried to stay them to have some one help him with the women. But the men jumped into the raceway. The screams of the women aroused McGill, who tried to put on the brakes. But the car was beyond control, and he shouted to the women to jump. The advice was heeded and the women piled into the street, falling in every direction. The car stopped after crashing against a telegraph pole at Mill and Ellison streets. The women were Miss Elizabeth De Monte, of Wayne; Mrs. Annie Millson and Miss Jackson, of Little Falls. The last is one of the youngest ladies of Passaic County. They were all injured and had to be taken into private residences and placed under doctor's care. The front of the car was entirely demolished. The car was completely demolished and the car was completely demolished and the car was completely demolished.

DAVID HAYMAN IN TROUBLE. Theatrical Manager May Be Held in Contempt of Court.

David Hayman, a theatrical manager, failed to appear in Supreme Court today when his name was called in supplementary proceedings before Justice O'Gorman. The order for inquiry was made on a judgment for $25,000 in favor of Mary F. Smith and Margaretta Dillon, dressmakers. Default was noted, and on Monday Jacob Marks, counsel for the dressmakers, will apply to the Supreme Court for an order to have Mr. Hayman show cause why he should not be adjudged guilty of contempt and sent to Ludlow Street Jail.

$25,000 FOR HIS LIFE. His Verdict Against the Third Avenue Railroad or Mrs. Scarpatti. A verdict for $25,000 was entered against the Metropolitan Railroad in the case of Giuseppe Scarpatti, widow of Vincent Scarpatti. The plaintiff's husband was killed by a Third Avenue car on the early morning of April 10, 1900. The case was heard before Justice Lawrence and a jury in the Supreme Court. John T. Little for the corporation moved to set aside the verdict on the ground of it being excessive. Justice Lawrence denied the motion and granted $25,000 extra allowances.

WOULDN'T SELL IT. Her Pure and Clear Complexion Not for Sale. A Cornell girl was put on a Grape-Nuts diet and discovered some facts. She says: "While a student at Cornell I suffered from indigestion, constipation and other social functions—served to completely upset a stomach already weak from rich pastry, highly seasoned meats, and confections furnished by loving parents at home. "I became irritable, nervous and my appetite became more and more capricious. Only rich, highly seasoned food suited me, and this further wrecked my health. I was pale, thin, having lost my pink and white complexion. I became dull-eyed and dull-brained, the victim of agonizing dyspepsia and constipation. To make matters worse, I was finally forced to leave school and came home an irritable, wretched sick girl. The plainest food disagreed with me, and I bade fair to starve to death, when a physician advised my physician to put me on a Grape-Nuts diet. To my astonishment, from wretched ill health to good health was marvellous. I liked the new food so well, and it agreed with my tortured stomach perfectly, regulated my bowels, my headaches left, and the color of the skin gradually grew better. In eight months I could myself rosy, plump and strong. "I would not sell my clear complexion, bright eyes and general good feeling for the costliest, richest mess of Delmonicoan potage. "I returned to Cornell, finished my course, and can now study, think and live. The food that enabled me to regain my health I shall never forget." Name furnished by Food-Cornel Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich.

WANDERER HAD SMALL-POX. James Lahey Walked About the City While He Had the Disease. James Lahey, thirty-five years old, a laborer without a home, has been walking about the city for the past six days with the small-pox. He walked into the dispensary of Bellevue Hospital to-day and the doctor in charge said that he had small-pox in the most malignant form. Deputy Superintendent Rickard had the man immediately isolated and the Board of Health notified. This is the twelfth case that has appeared at the Bellevue Hospital Dispensary in the last ten days.

GIRL ELOPES WITH COUSIN.

Pretty Lena Koller, of Newark, Gone with a Musician.

"Lena is well and happy. She and I will return when we hear that she will be forgiven. Yours, "CLEMMENT SHUSTER." This was the letter John Koller, of No. 100 Springfield avenue, Newark, received last night. Mr. Koller's pretty eighteen-year-old daughter Lena, had disappeared Thursday morning and her parents were half frantic with fear that she had been foully dealt with. They accused the idea that Lena could have gone away with her handsome cousin Clement, but that seems to have been the case. The letter was posted on a New York Central Railroad train some distance west of Albany. The father thinks the young couple have gone to Buffalo. Clement Shuster is a fine musician. He and Mr. Koller's daughters made up an orchestra whose specialty was to produce music from banjos, instruments of the accordion family, but far more complicated than the ordinary kind. Lena was the youngest daughter and soon after young Shuster came from Germany, about six years ago, an attachment sprang up between the cousins. Two years ago Clement asked Mr. Koller for Lena's hand. It was indignantly refused. The young man left Newark, but returned five months ago and again asked permission to marry Miss Koller. Again he was refused and again he left town. About a week ago he was seen near the Koller home and it is supposed he was seeking an interview with his sweetheart. Mr. Koller is ready to bestow the parental blessing, if the young couple will only return, as he wants his daughter to live with him, married or single.

BANK ROBBERS' GOOD HAUL. Get $20,000 from Wisconsin Bank and Escape.

MINERAL POINT, Wis., May 25.—The First Central Bank of this city was robbed early to-day of $20,000 or more, mostly in currency. Insurance covers the full amount of the loss. Entrance was effected through the shingled roof of the bank, which is a one-story structure. Thence, from the attic, the burglars made their way to the arched brick vault. The safe was blown open with nitroglycerine. Officers are scouring the surrounding country, but as yet there is no clue to the robbers.

SERCT. WADE'S WIFE SUES HIM.

Said to Have Had Title Given to Devery at Hotel.

Suit for absolute divorce has been begun by Joanna Wade against Frederick Ernest Wade, Howe & Hummel made application to-day for the plaintiff. The defendant is Police Sergeant Wade, of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, who is in receipt of a salary of $2,000 a year. In her complaint, Mrs. Wade states that she married the defendant at Christ Church, Oct. 31, 1895, and that they lived together happily until May, 1898, when the defendant is alleged to have become so cruel that her life became miserable. On Jan. 29, 1899, an action for separation on the ground of cruelty was begun, and a decree, with alimony of $15 a week, was granted in favor of the plaintiff. "Subsequent to this judgment," says the complaint, "on the defendant's plea of reform, a reconciliation took place. For a short time we lived together, but I soon discovered that he was deceiving me and devoting his time and attention to other women, notably to a married woman of the name of Ruth Benedict. "It is alleged that Wade frequently registered with his companion as 'Mr. Milder' and 'Mrs. Milder' is a title frequently given to Devery, who is Wade's close friend.
